02 Company History and Leadership

Experienced leadership, local knowledge and international client support shape our approach to protection and mobility.

SAS International has provided security, executive protection and mobility services for international visitors to Pakistan since 2012. We combine management oversight, client liaison, local knowledge, transport coordination and field supervision. Each assignment is planned around the client's itinerary, operating environment, duration and required level of support.

Group Captain (Retd.) Abdul Saeed Khan, TI(M), brings a Pakistan Air Force background in security management, institutional protocol and senior military liaison. His career includes service as Personal Staff Officer to successive Chairmen of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Committee and Aide-de-Camp to the Chief of Air Staff. In 1987, the United States Air Force recognised his leadership and performance on the Basic Investigators Course at the Office of Special Investigations.

This experience informs the company's emphasis on preparation, discretion and clear responsibility. Former armed forces officers and trained security professionals work alongside staff responsible for analysis, driving, protocol, logistics and administration. Protection, mobility and local support are organised through a shared assignment plan.

04 Protection and Risk Services

Personal protection, security staffing and analytical support are combined according to the client's requirements and operating environment.

Personal Protection

Security Personnel

Intelligence and Protocol

Executive and Close Protection

Close protection begins before the client arrives. The itinerary, venues and movement requirements are reviewed so that the protection profile reflects the anticipated environment. Assignments can combine discreet personal protection, security escorts, protective driving and first-response medical support. Officers with military backgrounds and experience in formal corporate or diplomatic settings help clients maintain their professional programme within a coordinated protective arrangement. Team leaders connect field decisions with the operations function, while the level of visibility and support is matched to the assignment.

Protective Intelligence and Risk Assessment

Protective risk consulting and data analysis support informed planning. Client objectives, itinerary details, locations, timing and local information are reviewed alongside threats and vulnerabilities. This informs the team, vehicles, liaison and contingencies proposed for the assignment. Advance preparation can include route and venue reconnaissance where feasible, with local networks helping confirm access and operating arrangements. Our published insights address travel risk, geopolitical developments and cyber resilience, supporting a wider understanding of the client's operating environment. Assessments are reviewed as circumstances change.

Armed Security Personnel

Armed personnel draw on armed forces and Special Service Group experience for VIP escort, sensitive-site security and other requirements involving a higher protection profile. Selection considers the role, local environment and duties to be performed. The operational brief addresses supervision, communications, equipment and the client's procedures. Armed deployment is arranged where required and permitted, in accordance with the applicable licences, territorial permissions and service conditions. Responsible handling, professional conduct and clear command arrangements are central to delivery.

Protocol and Client Liaison

Protocol support connects executive courtesy with practical coordination. Personnel assist with visiting delegations, formal meetings, airport movements and the handover between protection and transport teams. Responsibilities are allocated before the assignment so that the client has a clear point of contact. English-speaking personnel help international visitors communicate with drivers, local service providers and relevant authorities. The objective is a respectful, discreet presence that supports the client's schedule, privacy and working environment.

Unarmed Security and Access Management

Unarmed personnel support corporate offices, residential locations, retail environments and other premises requiring an approachable security presence. Duties can include visitor management, identity checks, entry-point control, physical patrols, surveillance and incident reporting. Personnel act as a professional first point of contact while maintaining awareness of activity around the site. Assignment planning defines the coverage, post responsibilities, reporting requirements and response arrangements so that guarding forms part of the client's wider security procedures.

Selection, Briefing and Professional Conduct

Our personnel network includes experienced former armed forces officers, trained security professionals, analysts and operational support staff. Personnel are selected for mission fit and briefed on the itinerary, communications, client procedures and expected conduct. Screening, training and supervision support readiness, while field leadership maintains a consistent reporting line. Information is shared according to operational need, and the client's identity, movements and business interests are treated with discretion. After-action review and client feedback help strengthen subsequent planning and delivery.

05 Secure Mobility and Airport Services

Secure travel combines a suitable vehicle, an experienced driver and coordinated preparation from arrival to destination.

Our service includes soft-skin vehicles for discreet executive travel and armoured options where the risk assessment calls for additional protection. SUVs, executive sedans and group vehicles are selected around passenger numbers, luggage, routes, duty duration and the protection requirement. English-speaking security drivers and close protection personnel can be incorporated into the same assignment plan.

Vehicle Category	Typical Requirement	Details Confirmed for Deployment
Executive Sedans	Individual travellers and small teams; business visits and airport transfers.	Model, passenger and luggage capacity, driver, duty period and itinerary.
SUVs and 4x4 Vehicles	Executive movements, accompanying personnel and varied journey requirements.	Vehicle configuration, route suitability, seating, luggage and supporting personnel.
Armoured Vehicles	B6/B7 options for movements requiring an armoured configuration.	Exact protection package, applicable certification, protected areas, condition and availability.
Minivans and Microbuses	Delegations, project teams, group transfers and multi-person programmes.	Seating, baggage space, collection points, journey schedule and driver requirement.

Onward Journey

Journey Management and Security Drivers

Driver allocation is part of the operational plan. Movement schedules, collection points, destination details and communication channels are coordinated with the protection team and client contact. Local awareness, route preparation, monitoring and contingency arrangements support the journey as a whole. For armoured movements, we assess the protection package alongside the technical documentation, vehicle condition and operating environment. Armouring is one layer of protection; it works with trained personnel, reliable communications and practical journey management.

Service Configuration

Each transport plan confirms the vehicle model or category, capacity, duty period, driver and agreed inclusions. Longer programmes and multi-location assignments can combine vehicle types and personnel, with replacement or standby arrangements specified according to the service requirement. Vehicle allocation and any specialist equipment are confirmed for the assignment.

Meet-and-Greet and Airport Assistance

Airport assistance links arrival or departure with ground transportation and personal protection. Services can include reception at the aircraft or aerobridge where permitted, assistance through airport formalities and baggage coordination. Protocol personnel liaise with the assigned driver and protection team so that the terminal-to-vehicle transition follows the same plan. Flight monitoring helps the operation adjust to delays, early arrivals or terminal changes. Airport access and expedited assistance remain subject to local permissions and procedures.

From Terminal to Destination

Before movement, the collection point, vehicle, passenger details, luggage and destination are agreed. The handover identifies the personnel responsible for airport liaison and the onward journey. Waiting requirements, changes to the flight programme and any additional protocol support are addressed in the service scope, helping keep arrival arrangements aligned with the client's schedule.

06 Planning and Operational Response

Central coordination connects client objectives with personnel, vehicles, local support and field reporting throughout the assignment.

01

Register the Requirement

Record the objectives, locations, itinerary, duration, traveller numbers, service preferences and constraints. Identify the regional coordinator and the contacts responsible for planning and approval.

02

Review Scope and Risk

Assess threats, vulnerabilities and operating conditions. Review local permissions, client procedures and available resources. Use the assessment to define the proposed protection and transport configuration.

03

Allocate Resources

Assign the team lead, personnel, drivers, vehicles and supporting staff. Confirm logistics, protocol, communications, reporting, commercial scope and deployment responsibilities.

04

Brief and Confirm

Issue the operational brief. Agree communication channels, escalation contacts and handover arrangements. Brief personnel on the itinerary, client instructions and contingencies before deployment.

05

Deliver and Monitor

Field leadership coordinates delivery with management oversight. Reports, movement updates and incident information support adjustments to timing, location, conditions and client requirements.

06

Debrief and Review

Reconcile operational and financial records and capture client feedback. Apply lessons learned to improve subsequent briefings, logistics, resource allocation and service delivery.

24/7 Operational Coordination

Operational readiness combines preparation, local access and adaptation to changing conditions. Our 24/7 coordination connects clients, management and field teams through defined contacts, reporting intervals, decision authority and escalation. Local liaison coordinates access and resources; field leadership manages routine delivery and refers significant developments to management.

Information and Operational Reporting

Itineraries, personnel allocations, vehicle requirements and client instructions are organised to support decisions. During delivery, activity logs, movement information and operational updates create a record of the assignment. After completion, management can review resources, expenses and lessons. Technology supports this process, while experienced personnel remain responsible for interpreting the information and acting on it.

Communications and Continuity

Agreed channels and scheduled status updates maintain operational visibility. Backup communications support continuity when the normal channel is unavailable. The contact sheet and briefing define reporting, missed-contact escalation and the personnel responsible for coordinating additional support.

Emergency and Medical Coordination

Standby resources, replacement transport, local medical support and response escalation are coordinated according to the incident, operating location and agreed requirements. Medical response and evacuation coordination can be incorporated into the assignment plan. Supporting providers, responsibilities and any response commitments are defined in the service scope and briefing.

Confidentiality and Accountability

Client identities, travel programmes and operating details are shared on an operational need-to-know basis. Defined responsibilities, disciplined reporting and review support accountability and respect for the client's privacy.
